I. Introduction and Overview

On February 18, 1981, Governor Pierre S. duPont, IV signed into law the Financial Center Development Act. The FCDA embodies a comprehensive package of new initiatives designed to respond to the changing needs of and patterns for the conduct of business by banking and financial institutions. The modernization of Delaware's banking practices underscores the purpose of the FCDA; namely, that market forces rather than isolated state regulations should control the availability of credit. The FCDA recognizes that those state regulations which must exist should be vastly simplified; in line with this goal, the FCDA eliminates the morass of unnecessary distinctions among various forms of credit transactions.

By virtue of the enticing regulatory and tax provisions, the FCDA is designed to attract to Delaware the operations of out-of-state bank holding companies, affiliated finance companies, and other providers of credit. The legislation sets forth the criteria for establishing a banking subsidiary in Delaware. The FCDA grants banks wide latitude in credit transactions and establishes low tax and licensing provisions for banks and other finance companies which relocate in Delaware. At the same time, the FCDA seeks to protect the business of existing Delaware banks and permits these institutions to enjoy the benefits of the FCDA as well.

The clarity and flexibility of the new Delaware provisions governing the extension of credit take on heightened importance in light of a federal provision which allows a national bank to "export" the law of the state in which it operates to govern transactions with its...

II. BANK HOLDING COMPANIES

A. Eligibility

The Bank Holding Company Act of 1956 was intended to restrict the geographical expansion of bank holding companies. The Act prevented a bank holding company from purchasing more than five percent of the voting stock of a bank located in any state other than its "home" state (i.e., where its largest banking subsidiary was located) in the absence of specific legislative authorization by the "host" state to do so. In an effort to preserve the integrity of the existing Delaware banking community, an out-of-state bank holding company or any subsidiary thereof is still limited by the FCDA from acquiring more than five percent of the stock of an existing Delaware bank. However, the FCDA grants the permission allowed by 12 U.S.C. section 1842 for an out-of-state bank holding company or any subsidiary thereof to acquire a newly chartered, single-office

5. See FCDA, supra note 1, § 2 (to be codified in Del. Code Ann. tit. 5, § 801(1)). The term "subsidiary" means, with respect to an out-of-state bank holding company, (1) any company 25% or more of whose voting shares are directly or indirectly owned or controlled by such bank holding company, or are held by it with power to vote; or (2) any company the election of a majority of whose directors is controlled in any manner by such bank holding company.

7. The new bank whose stock is to be acquired may be either a national or a state chartered bank. A national bank seeking a federal charter must obtain approval from the Office of the Comptroller of Currency, Department of the Treasury, pursuant to the National Bank Act of 1874, ch. 343, 18 Stat. 123, as amended by 12 U.S.C. §§ 21-27 (Supp. 1979), before filing an application pursuant to the FCDA. If the new bank seeks a state charter, it must first submit an application to the Delaware Bank Commissioner. Following approval of its state charter, the new bank may apply for membership in the Federal Reserve System pursuant to the Federal Reserve Act, 12 U.S.C. § 321 (1945). In the alternative, the new bank may seek only to become an insured bank by submitting an application pursuant to the Federal Deposit Insurance Act, 12 U.S.C. § 1815 (1976). At the present time, acquiring a national charter may be advantageous in an effort to minimize prospective litigation as to the national reach of the credit provisions of the FCDA. See Marquette Nat'l Bank of Minneapolis v. First of Omaha Serv. Corp., 439 U.S. 299 (1978). State-chartered federally insured banks may be able to justify the exportation of their interest rates in light of the Depository Institutions Deregulation and Monetary Control Act of 1980, 12 U.S.C. § 1831(d) (1976).
bank which is open to the public in Delaware. The bank must commence operations with a minimum capital stock and paid-in surplus of $10 million, and it must increase its capitalization to $25 million within one year. It must also employ, within one year of the commencement of business operations, a minimum of 100 persons. In addition, the Delaware office must be operated in a manner and at a location which is unlikely to attract customers from the general public to the substantial detriment of local banks which existed prior to the effective date of the FCDA.\textsuperscript{8}

The acquisition of voting stock in the Delaware bank must be approved in advance by the State Bank Commissioner.\textsuperscript{9} The criteria which the Commissioner must consider are:

1. The financial and managerial resources of the out-of-state bank holding company or its subsidiary;

2. The future prospects of the out-of-state bank holding company and the bank whose assets or shares it will acquire or its subsidiary;

3. The financial history of the out-of-state bank holding company or its subsidiary;

4. Whether such acquisition or holding may result in undue concentration of resources or substantial lessening of competition in [Delaware]; and

5. The convenience and needs of the public of [Delaware].\textsuperscript{10}

The out-of-state bank holding company or any subsidiary thereof may continue to operate its Delaware office only so long as it complies with the above conditions. Upon any violation of these conditions, the Commissioner may issue an order to remedy the violation.\textsuperscript{11} In the event of continued noncompliance, the Commissioner may order a divestiture order within a two year period; however, such order is subject to a review \textit{de novo} by the Delaware Court of Chancery.\textsuperscript{12}

A companion bill\textsuperscript{13} also amends Delaware's Corporation Law for State Banks and Trust Companies in order to ease the entry of a bank holding company or any subsidiary thereof into the Delaware banking community and to enable the newly created Delaware bank to engage in modern banking practices such as international banking and revised hours and location of business by:

(a) reducing the number of incorporators necessary to carry out the planned acquisition of stock in a bank located in Delaware from fifteen to three, two of whom must be citizens and residents of Delaware; \(^{(14)}\)

(b) permitting the establishment of foreign branches or places of business by Delaware banks or trust companies with a minimum of $1 million in paid-in capital; \(^{(16)}\)

(c) permitting a bank to invest up to 50% of its capital in real estate suitable for the conduct of its business; \(^{(10)}\)

(d) permitting the State Bank Commissioner to adopt rules governing the time required to start up a new bank or branch in Delaware; \(^{(17)}\) and

(e) clarifying that letters of credit and standby letters of credit issued by banks or trust companies are not to be construed as guarantees. \(^{(16)}\)

B. Tax Benefits

The regressively graduated tax schedule for computation of the franchise tax is one of the principal inducements for a domestic or foreign institution to establish a Delaware subsidiary. The sliding scale would tax net income not in excess of $20 million at the rate of 8.7%; net income over $20 million, but not in excess of $25 million, would be taxed at 6.7%; net income over $25 million, but not in excess of $30 million, would be taxed at 4.7%; and net income in excess of $30 million would be taxed at 2.7%. \(^{(10)}\)

Prior to the enactment of the FCDA, the franchise tax was applied to the net income of banks, trust companies, and national banks located in Delaware. The definition of net income permitted the deduction of federal income taxes. \(^{(20)}\) A bank's net earnings could be further reduced by interest income from obligations of the State of Delaware.

20. FCDA, supra note 1, § 6 (to be codified in Del. Code Ann. tit. 5, § 1101). This provision states that the net income on which the franchise tax is imposed "shall be that defined by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation (12 CFR 335) or other appropriate federal authority and reported to the State Bank Commissioner . . . ."
Delaware or any of its political subdivisions as well as by any dividends and contributions to net income from subsidiaries.\(^{21}\) In the computation of net income, the FCDA permits the inclusion of an additional deduction. Taxable net income can now be reduced by the amount of net income earned by non-United States branches of a Delaware bank, provided that eighty percent of the foreign branches' gross income is from sources outside the United States.\(^{22}\)

C. Credit Transaction Benefits

The thrust of the FCDA is to grant banks wide latitude in the extension of credit. First and foremost, the FCDA eliminates all interest rate ceilings. Furthermore, the FCDA sets forth no restrictions on the type of loan, the type of borrower, or loan limits. Consumer and commercial credit transactions are covered. Here, a special feature of the FCDA should be noted. The term "borrower" is used to denote any natural or juristic entity which might have occasion to borrow.\(^{23}\) "Individual borrower" is separately defined as a natural person borrowing for personal, household, or family purposes.\(^{24}\) This distinction permits the FCDA to provide some consumer oriented safeguards without imposing any similar restrictions on commercial credit transactions.

The FCDA makes it clear that, with respect to commercial loans (loans to non-individual borrowers), all terms are open and subject to negotiation between the borrower and the bank. Areas subject to negotiation include prepayment or refinancing charges, late charges, attorneys' fees, collection expenses, and the extension or deferment of any scheduled payment.\(^{25}\)

Under the new statutory scheme, all bank credit is divided into two categories: (a) open-end or revolving credit, and (b) closed-end or installment credit. A revolving credit plan is defined as involving an extension of credit under an agreement between the bank and the borrower in which the bank permits the borrower, from time to time, to make purchases and/or to obtain loans by means of a credit device.\(^{26}\) Thus, a revolving credit plan is defined broadly to include credit card purchases, cash advances, check credit, and overdraft checking. Closed-end credit is defined as an extension of credit pursuant to an arrangement or agreement which is not a revolving credit plan.\textsuperscript{27} The term "loan" is defined as any single extension of closed-end credit.\textsuperscript{28} The FCDA provisions dealing with the deregulation of credit transactions apply to both types of credit. They differ only with respect to the imposition of charges in addition to or in lieu of interest as a result of the distinctive nature of these two forms of lending.

1. Variable Rate Loans

In light of the recent upward surge in interest rates, the most significant change may be that which permits all forms of bank credit to be granted on a variable rate basis. A variable rate loan is defined as one which, from time to time, may vary in accordance with a schedule or formula.\textsuperscript{29} The significance of this provision is that the newly imposed rate may be made applicable to all balances which are then outstanding including balances which arose prior to the variation in the rate. This provision will permit banks to continue to extend credit during periods of rising interest rates since banks will not have to be concerned about paying more for funds for their own use in the future than they will receive in interest for the use of their previously distributed funds. As with other businesses, banks are now in a position to pass on to borrowers the high cost of their product, \textit{i.e.}, credit. Finally, variable interest rate agreements may be offered in the context of installment loans only if the interest on the loan is not pre-computed and taken in advance.\textsuperscript{30}

2. Change in Terms

If the agreement governing a revolving credit plan so provides, a bank may unilaterally amend the terms governing the plan including the rate of interest charged under the plan, by giving notice of such amendment and by deeming any further use of the account after a minimum fifteen day notice period to be an acceptance of the change. If the borrower decides to accept a change in terms by further use of the account by making additional purchases or cash advances, the change will apply to the entire balance outstanding in the borrower's account, including any portion of the balance representing transactions which occurred prior to the change in terms. However, a borrower who does not accept the change must be afforded the opportunity of paying his outstanding balance pursuant to the terms of the unamended agreement.31 These provisions apply specifically to consumer credit transactions. As previously noted for commercial accounts, the FCDA provides that changes in terms will be governed by the agreement between the bank and the borrower.32

3. Skip-Payment Option

A bank may unilaterally offer a borrower the privilege of deferring periodic payments.33 Such a provision is intended mainly to reflect the existing practice of many banks of extending a so-called "skip-payment option" during summer and holiday periods.

4. Insurance and Collateral

In the case of an "individual borrower," a bank may request but not require a variety of credit insurance on the person or the property securing an indebtedness from an insurer acceptable to the bank. A bank may require such insurance from all other borrowers. In each instance, the offer and placement of insurance is subject to the restrictions imposed by the applicable provisions of the insurance laws.34 A bank may also request such collateral as it deems acceptable in order to secure its loan.35

5. Late and Default Charges

A bank is permitted to impose a penalty upon a defaulting borrower, either by charging a higher rate of interest on outstanding unpaid installments (except in the case of an "individual borrower") or by imposing a flat delinquency charge (which may be imposed even on an "individual borrower"), or both.36

36. FCDA, supra note 1, § 4 (revolving credit), § 5 (installment credit) (to be codified in Del. Code Ann. tit. 5, §§ 950, 968).
6. Attorneys' Fees and Collection Costs

In the event of default and if the credit agreement so provides, a bank may refer the account to an attorney and hold the borrower liable for reasonable attorneys' fees. If it is necessary to file a collection action, the bank may also recover from the borrower all court and collection costs.37

7. Other Charges

If the credit plan so provides, a bank may impose other charges in addition to or in lieu of interest. For revolving credit transactions, such additional charges may include a membership fee for the credit privileges made available to the borrower. Additionally, transaction charges for each separate loan transaction may be assessed, as well as a minimum periodic charge for any period during which some amount of credit is outstanding.38 The additional charges applicable only to a closed-end loan would encompass loan fees, “points,” finders' fees, and other front-end charges and, in addition, reasonable fees for actual expenses incurred or services rendered by the bank. In the case of a loan to an individual borrower, front-end or other charges are not collectible unless the loan agreement so provides.39

8. Prepayment and Refinancing Charges

Banks frequently collect prepaid interest on an installment loan by way of discount, add-on, or other similar method; upon prepayment in full of such a loan, the borrower is entitled to a rebate of interest which has customarily been calculated in accordance with the “rule of 78’s.” Reflecting the growing unpopularity of this rule, the FCDA eliminates the rule of 78's and requires that the rebate be computed pursuant to the “actuarial method.” 40 The “actuarial method” is one of allocating payments made on the loan between the outstanding balance of the loan and interest thereon pursuant to which a payment is applied first to the accumulated interest; the remainder is then subtracted from the outstanding balance of the loan.41 By calculating the refund of unearned interest in this manner, the borrower is, in effect, given the benefit of the equivalent of a simple annual interest calculation. A bank may not impose any prepayment penalty on a consumer loan except in the case of a residential mortgage loan where the penalty or charge specified in the pertinent agreement, bond, or note will govern.42 The bank must also refund any unearned insurance premium.43 Finally, a bank may collect a charge in connection with the refinancing of a loan.44

III. Affiliated Finance Companies

The FCDA clarifies the status of an affiliated finance company as an entity set up to buy receivables or make loans to companies with which it is affiliated.45 The importance of this definition is that the FCDA exempts an affiliated finance company from all state taxes. Instead, a flat licensing fee is imposed on the capital base of such a company ranging from $10,000 on capital under $100 million to $50,000 on capital over $750 million.46 "Capital base" is defined as "capital, surplus and retained earnings or equivalent accounting terms, as set forth in the company's certified financial statement."47

IV. Application of FCDA's Liberal Credit
Provisions to Other Classes of Loans

Effective June 1, 1981, provisions of the FCDA were activated which will govern small loans,48 financing of motor vehicle purchases,49 secondary mortgages,50 and retail installment sales.51 With regard to each class of loans, interest rate ceilings have been eliminated; interest may now be charged in accordance with the agreement governing each type of loan. Pursuant to the FCDA, interest may now be calculated and collected in advance on installment-type loans. In the event of prepayment in full of such loan, the borrower is entitled to an interest rebate calculated pursuant to the actuarial method. Furthermore, no prepayment or other penalty charge may be assessed.

V. Conclusion

The Delaware Financial Center Development Act is to the banking and financial communities what the Delaware General Corporation Law has been to the corporate community. The FCDA simplifies both the classification and regulation of credit. It grants complete flexibility to banks in fixing and adjusting the costs charged for credit, unhampered by inconsistent and outdated state regulations, with regard to transactions throughout the United States. It should be noted that the new bank credit provisions set forth in the FCDA do not pre-empt their predecessor provisions; therefore, banks are free to extend credit in accordance with the new or former provisions or any combination thereof.

The FCDA complies with the federal guidelines concerning interstate bank ownership and thus offers bank holding companies an opportunity to set up a wholly-owned Delaware subsidiary. Such a bank would benefit from the regressive tax schedule.

The favorable tax and regulatory environment has not been lost on Chase Manhattan Corporation (Chase Manhattan Bank (U.S.A.), N.A.), J. P. Morgan and Co. (Morgan Bank (Delaware)), and Citicorp (Citibank (Delaware)), three of the nation's leading bank holding companies or First National Bank of Maryland (First Maryland Bancorp). Each one has initiated proceedings to establish a major new subsidiary in Delaware. In conclusion, the credit provisions, when coupled with the tax benefits available to out-of-state and foreign bank holding companies and affiliated finance companies, make the FCDA a unique and far-reaching piece of legislation.

Commissioner shall issue its written permission for the opening of the branch office. No certificate of authority shall be issued by the Com-

Such facilities may be manned by personnel of the bank, or may be unmanned or manned by a person under contract with, but not an officer or employee of, the operating bank. (32 Del. Laws, c. 103, § 4; 38 Del. Laws, c. 93, § 1(1); 38 Del. Laws, c. 94, § 20; Code 1935, §§ 2292, 2389; 46 Del. Laws, c. 251, §§ 1, 2; 5 Del. C. 1953, § 770; 49 Del. Laws, c. 127; 56 Del.
